Study evaluates Prop 48 class

Grad rate seems generally higher

An NCAA study indicates that the graduation rate of student-athletes at Division I institutions increased after Proposition 48 went into effect in 1986.

NCAA Research Report 92-01 differs from the NCAA graduation-rate report of all 297 Division I institutions that was released in August.

The new report represents the first look at graduation data that compare a sample of student-athletes who entered selected Division I institutions before 1986 with a sample of student-athletes who entered in August 1986. The data from Report 92-01 indicate that the overall graduation rate jumped from 48.1 percent for student-athletes who entered in 1984 or 1985 to 56.5 percent for those student-athletes who entered in the fall of 1986.

■ Research Committee chair discusses findings: Page 4

These are five-year graduation rates, based on data collected in the ongoing Study of Academic Performance of Student-Athletes.

Other major findings of this report are:

■ Graduation rates for the groups who did not achieve the minimum test score or core grade-point average (partial qualifiers) were increased in most cases.

■ Graduation rates for full qualifiers in the revenue sports (football and men's basketball) were actually lower in 1986 than they were in 1984 and 1985.

■ The graduation rate for female student-athletes increased

Centennial shake

Bernard W. Franklin (left), president of Livingstone College, and Robert Albright, president of Johnson C. Smith University, took part in the festivities commemorating the 100th anniversary of black college football October 17. Livingstone and Johnson C. Smith, which then was known as Biddle, met in 1892 in the first football game between two black colleges. Biddle won, 5-0. Johnson C. Smith edged Livingstone in the centennial matchup, 14-6.

Number of proposals hits 176

The number of proposals to be acted upon by delegates to the 1993 NCAA Convention has climbed to 176 with the addition of amendments-to-amendments and resolutions submitted by the October 15 deadline.

That total includes 45 that will be voted upon by roll call as a result of decisions by the officers of the Presidents Commission in an October 21 meeting in Chicago.

The 45 all are designated for consideration on Presidential Agenda Day at the January 1993 Convention (Thursday, January 14). The Presidential Agenda Day is a new concept approved earlier this year after being jointly recommended by the Presidents Commission Subcommittee on the Role and Structure of the Commission and the Special Committee to Review NCAA Legislative Procedures.

The total of 176 is down a bit from 180 at the same point last year and 183 two years ago. The total designated for roll calls is up from 30 at the 1992 Convention but way under the 95 specified for the 1991 Convention.

Included in the 45-piece schedule for Presidential Agenda Day are all but one of the Commission-sponsored proposals (one is noncontroversial and will appear in the consent package), a few others supported by the Commission, several opposed by the Commission, and a handful of others deemed by the Commission officers to have

Sports committees discuss championships

Hearings pertaining to possible revisions in the NCAA championships program were conducted October 21-22 in Kansas City, Missouri.

A subcommittee of the NCAA Division I Championships Committee heard presentations from chairs of committees and subcommittees representing National Collegiate and Division I championships. The re-evaluation of the championships program began in May.

The NCAA Executive Committee is assessing the championships program from all angles, including finances, participation, sponsorship, policies, committee structure and officiating. The first step in the review was taken this summer when the membership was surveyed on its attitudes toward championships. A summary of that survey appeared in the August 5 issue of The NCAA News.

Division I Vice-President R. Elaine Dreidame, senior associate director of athletics at the University of Dayton, discusses championships issues.

The October 21-22 meetings were designed for the sports committee representatives to make their observations, to discuss where the Executive Committee currently stands on championships and to discuss the applications of those positions to their own events.

The Executive Committee has identified the following championships principles, which it will refine over the next several months:

■ Championships field sizes (and seeding, in team championships) should be based on sports sponsorship levels in the membership.

■ A specific number of sponsoring institutions should be required to continue an existing championship or to establish a new championship.

■ Men's and women's championships should be treated equitably in terms of field sizes, per diem allowances and travel parties.

■ In team sports, all eligible conferences should have access to the championships, via either automatic qualification or play-in systems on a regional basis. In individual-team championships, further consideration should be given to regional qualifying systems in sports that do not currently

Declaring war on opponents

Confrontations on the football field are nothing for East Texas State University's Phillip Anderson.

Having faced opponents on a battle field might have something to do with it.

Anderson, a 30-year-old defensive lineman for the Lions, returned to the collegiate football ranks after serving seven years in the U.S. Army. A portion of that time was spent as a squad leader in combat.

Understandably, Anderson has gained some experience his teammates just can't match.

"We were on an urban-assault mission," he recently told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, "(and) a hand grenade bounced into the room I was in."

Anderson was blown through a window, and the partial hearing loss and injuries to his back and shoulder brought an end to his military career. He then decided to return to college football.

It was familiar territory. Before enlisting in the Army, Anderson played two seasons and redshirted another at Texas Tech University. A disagreement with the coaching staff and a distaste for the academic side of college (he had accumulated a 1.600-grade-point average) sent Anderson packing for the Army.

Things have changed. Anderson recently completed 17 hours with a GPA of 3.510 (4.000 scale) and has set his sights this fall on making the dean's list. He is expected to graduate in the spring with a degree in business administration.

"One thing the Army teaches you is discipline," he said. "It takes discipline to play football and to study.

"I'm much better at it now."

He's a hero again

Gary Trost's sport may be basketball, but he collected a major-league save this summer.

Trost, a 6-foot-10 senior on the Brigham Young University basketball team, saved the lives of a Las Vegas, Nevada, family of seven whose vehicle had collided with a three-ton truck, crashed into a lava rock and burst into flames. The family was traveling in Idaho on the way to Yellowstone National Park.

Trost—who was traveling with his wife, Sheri, and her brother, David Clark—also got help from Brian Loosli, who had been working in the area.

While Clark went to the highway to flag down trucks, Trost ran to the family's Suburban and carried two of the girls from the burning vehicle. Loosli carried the other two girls out the back seat.

Still, the two parents and their 17-year-old son were trapped in the front of the Suburban, the mother pinned between the steering wheel and seat, the father unconscious from having hit the dashboard. Their son's foot was entangled in the gas pedal.

The biggest concern was getting the three out of the car before the fire reached the gas tank and exploded. The men pulled the father and son from the truck by removing a door, but the mother still was pinned in her seat.

"Don't move me," said the mother, who told Trost to leave her before the car exploded.

Trost didn't leave. Instead, he climbed through the back door, sat on top of the back seat and pushed the steering wheel and dash, gaining enough space to maneuver the mom out of the truck.

About two minutes later, flames engulfed the vehicle.

"My kids wouldn't have a mother if it weren't for him," the father said. "And I wouldn't have a wife."

Heroic acts are nothing new for Trost, who on two other occasions has helped accident victims until ambulances could arrive.

"If this happens again," Trost told the Deseret News, "I'm going to drop basketball and get my EMT. It seems like my duty in life."

Olympic hopes

An Ohio Wesleyan University swimmer making the Olympic Trials is news. It is even bigger news when those trials are in Latvia.

Andre Barbins, a senior captain for the Ohio Wesleyan swim team last season, got the chance to try out for the country's Olympic team because both his parents were born in Latvia, which gained its independence just last year.

"It was a great experience, especially since I still have family there," Barbins said. "The first night of competition there was a terrific opening ceremony, and the trials were on TV that night.

"It was a lot bigger there than the regular meets I swam here in the States."

Barbins recorded personal-best times in the 50-meter freestyle, the 100-meter freestyle and the 50-meter butterfly but was unable to go to the Olympics because of a rule that states that an athlete must live in Latvia for a year before being eligible to compete for its Olympic team.

Barbins plans to meet that residence requirement next time.

"It was great," he said. "I was able to see the country not as a tourist but like I was actually living there with the people."

Award waits 49 years

If Earl Banks thought the person presenting him with a plaque for being elected to the College Football Hall of Fame looked familiar, there was good reason.

The presenter was Pat Harmon, historian-curator of the hall of fame, who was on hand October 24 to give Banks the plaque during a game between Delaware State College and Morgan State University, where Banks compiled a 96-31-2 record as coach.

And it was Harmon who presented Banks with his first award—an all-state high-school certificate 49 years ago when Harmon was a sports editor picking an all-state team.

It actually was the second time that Harmon has presented a hall of fame plaque more than 45 years later to one of his former selections. In 1989, Harmon presented a plaque to Chalmers "Bump" Elliott.

■ Milestones

University of Wisconsin, Whitewater, women's volleyball coach Kris Russell picked up her 400th career victory October 10 when the Warhawks defeated the University of Wisconsin, Superior, 15-6, 16-14, 15-3. Russell, who is in her 12th season at Wisconsin-Whitewater, led the Warhawks to NCAA championship berths in 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989, finishing fourth in 1988. She also received Division III all-region and coach-of-the-year honors in 1988.

When Washington and Jefferson College's football team beat Widener University, 35-0, earlier this season, the school became one of only three Division III institutions to win 500 games. The other two are Wittenberg University and Widener.

Messiah College men's soccer coach Layton Shoemaker became just the 11th coach in any division to win 300 matches when the Falcons defeated the University of La Verne October 5. In his 25 years as a head coach, Shoemaker has compiled a 300-104-30 record, 237-75-24 in his 19 years at Messiah.

Denison University head football coach Keith Piper got an extra birthday present October 10 when he won his 200th game—all at Denison—in a 29-24 victory over Earlham College. Piper is the 24th coach in NCAA history to win 200 games and the 14th to do so at one school.

When the Gettysburg College women's volleyball team beat Moravian College in the semifinals of the Gettysburg Classic October 3, Gettysburg coach Doreen Drexel picked up her 300th victory at the school. Drexel joins Carol Fritz at Western Maryland College and Larry Bock at Juniata College as the only coaches in the history of the Middle Atlantic Conference to reach 300 career victories.

■ Fact file

In the grants-in-aid portion of the revenue-distribution program for 1991-92, 15 institutions received no allocation because they did not award athletically related aid under NCAA definitions (the service academies, nine Division I-AA institutions and three in Division I-AAA). Otherwise, the lowest 20 in numbers of grants-in-aid awarded all were in Division I-AAA, and their totals ranged from the lowest of 20.40 grants awarded in the entire athletics program to 39.45. Lowest among Division I-AA members other than those awarding no athletics aid: 50.0. Lowest in Division I-A: 115.90.

Single-structure conferences increase

More than 85 percent of all NCAA conferences that offer multiple sports are structured to serve both men's and women's athletics, according to an annual study conducted by the NCAA Committee on Review and Planning.

Of the 87 NCAA conferences offering more than one sport in 1991-92, 75—or 86.2 percent—were single-structure conferences, offering both men's and women's programs. That is up from 81.4 percent in 1990-91, 79.8 percent the year before that and 55.7 percent in 1983-84, the first year of the study.

By division, 33 of the 36 multi-sport conferences in Division I involved both men and women, as did 19 of 20 in Division II and 23 of 31 in Division III.

Overall, there were 109 conferences in the NCAA in 1991-92. That figure includes 22 single-sport conferences, 21 of them for men.

Of the total of 109, 75 were for both men and women, as noted. That is 68.8 percent of all conferences, up from 64.2 the year before and 62.0 the year before that. In 1983-84, only 44.4 percent (44 of 99) of all NCAA conferences offered multiple sports for both men and women.

It was the 1983-84 review that caused the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee—the forerunner of the Committee on Review and Planning—to conduct the study annually. The committee took the position after the first review that a common conference structure for both men's and women's programs is preferable to separate structures, in most instances.

All of college sports collects Duke stamp

Ex-commissioner makes lasting contributions

By David D. Smale
SPECIAL TO THE NCAA NEWS

■ Where are they now?

Wayne Duke has made his mark on many in the world of athletics, including University of Indiana, Bloomington, basketball coach Bobby Knight and golf professional Arnold Palmer.

NCAA File

Wayne Duke

Lives in: Barrington, Illinois.
Occupation: Retired.
Formerly: Assistant Executive Director, NCAA (1952-1963); Commissioner, Big Eight Conference (1963-1971); Commissioner, Big Ten Conference (1971-1989).
Family: Wife, Martha; son, Dan; daughter, Sarah Summy, four grandchildren.

Thanks, Wayne Duke.

That certainly could be the thought of college sports fans in every corner of the nation if they knew of all his contributions. Duke's fingerprints are all over nearly every aspect of college sports, and even though he is retired, his influence will be around for years to come.

Some examples from the career of the former Big Eight and Big Ten Conference commissioner:

■ The Final Four gained immense popularity under his leadership. In his role as NCAA assistant executive director from 1952 to 1963, one of his primary responsibilities was to oversee the Division I Men's Basketball Championship. Later, he served for seven years, four as chair, on the Division I Men's Basketball Committee as the tournament expanded in size and popularity.

■ The influence of conferences in postseason competition reached a new level. Duke was a moving force in allowing more than one team from a conference to compete in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

■ He championed the cause of limiting grants-in-aid. College football teams with 70 scholarship players regularly were facing teams with more than double that number. He sought to create a competitive balance.

■ He wrote the first NCAA records book and the first championship handbook for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship. It was the model for the handbooks used today to govern all of the NCAA's 79 championships.

You get the point.

Getting started

"I'm like a lot of the NCAA people," Duke said. "When I was there, we had so much catching up to do (that) I got involved in everything. That is why I was able to be the commissioner of the Big Eight at age 34, which made me the youngest commissioner of a major conference in the country.

"I wrote the manuals, ran the basketball tournament, the College World Series, sat in on all Council and Executive Committee meetings, among other things. I think that getting involved in committee work when I went to the conferences was an extension of my national office work."

When he moved to the Big Eight, Duke said he didn't become immediately involved in NCAA activities.

"It went back to (former NCAA executive director) Walter Byers' philosophy: 'Performance commands respect,'" Duke said. "My age was not a factor to me, but I had not really earned the right to be heard. Walter advocated proving myself first.

"But not being involved bothered me. My respect for Walter, and my respect for the NCAA, made me feel the need and desire to participate in NCAA activities."

Duke knew from an early age that he wanted to be involved in college athletics. His father had only a sixth-grade education, and the family didn't have much money when Wayne was growing up.

But there always was enough money to attend a University of Iowa football game, which whetted his appetite for college sports.

Duke earned his bachelor's degree in journalism from Iowa in 1950 and accepted the job of sports information director at the Iowa State Teachers College, now the University of Northern Iowa. After a year in Cedar Falls, Iowa, he moved to Boulder, Colorado, to become sports information director at the University of Colorado, Boulder.

Then came the call.

The ground floor

"Harry Carlson was the AD and the dean of students at Colorado," Duke said. "He told me that Walter was interested in me. He counseled me to take a serious look at it because he felt the NCAA would be a powerful force in college athletics.

"But there was no way to know how powerful it would become. Maybe Walter had visions. He had a vision that few people had. But I was just 23 and two years out of school. I was somewhat in awe of it all.

"I spent the very first day in the office sitting on the floor sorting films of the past basketball championships, and I have been very close to it ever since. I had no thought of great things ahead. Sitting on the floor of a dusty office, it never gave me any kind of vision of today. I could barely see past the stack of films."

He got through that stack, and with Byers, a 29-year-old executive director, Duke formed a young, but dynamic, duo that set out to reform the world of college athletics.

"The Association was almost 50 years old, but we were starting from scratch," Duke said.

When the national office was formed, the men's basketball tournament had just been expanded from 16 to 22 teams. Getting coverage was difficult and sometimes impossible.

It remained a challenge even as late as the early 1960s.

"In the early 1960s," he told an Associated Press writer in 1990, "you had Oscar Robertson playing at Cincinnati and the Ohio State teams with (Jerry) Lucas and (John) Havlicek, and we were thrilled because we were able to get the top rate from the stations in Cincinnati and Columbus—$550 an hour. And at the time, it seemed like all the money in the world."

Today's tournament comprises 64 teams playing 63 games at 13 sites for television revenues of $1 billion over seven years.

A national event

Duke encountered resistance when he sought to allow more than one team from a conference to participate in the tournament. John Wooden, the legendary basketball coach from the University of California, Los Angeles, whose team for years had dominated what is now the Pacific-10 Conference, was especially opposed. But Duke knew it had to be done.

"We could see that there were great teams in conferences that were being left out," Duke said. "We were able to get that done in the 1970s. When I was chair of the committee, I used to say 'We are the guardians of college basketball. We have an awesome responsibility.'"

No regrets

Although Duke still views the deregulation of college football television as a "debilitating experience in my career," he says he has no regrets about his lifetime in college athletics.

But he will still step up on his soapbox when coaxed. "I believe that college athletics needs a reform agenda," he said. "How that will evolve is anybody's guess. Sometimes, and I say this as an old journalist, our profession doesn't appreciate college athletics for what it is. It too often casts a more negative impression than what exists. It doesn't mean that college athletics doesn't have its frailties. But much more time and energy is spent trying to solve those problems than is given credit."

Through all the reform movements and expansion work, Duke may be best remembered for a decision he was forced to make in 1981. He and Thomas W. Jernstedt, then an assistant executive director and currently the chief operating officer of the NCAA, were walking in the concourse of the Spectrum in Philadelphia when they noticed a television report on the assassination attempt on President Reagan.

"I told Tom that...we might not be able to play the game," Duke said. "We had a number of meetings with the commissioners, the school presidents and the coaches. It was my determination that television would not be involved in the meetings. (Eventually), we decided to play the game."

Accolades continue

The questions, at least the high-pressure ones, no longer hammer at Duke, who maintains a low profile these days. "One of

CNN's Shaw to emcee honors dinner

Cable network anchor to host January 13 awards program

Bernard Shaw, the principal Washington anchor for Cable News Network who won numerous national and international awards for his reporting during the first several days of the Persian Gulf war last year, will serve as master of ceremonies at the 1993 NCAA honors dinner.

The honors dinner will be conducted January 13 in Dallas at the 87th annual NCAA Convention.

Shaw received the Eduard Rhein Foundation's Cultural Journalistic Award, the Italian government's President's Award and the 1991 David Brinkley Award for Excellence in Communication from Barry University. In addition, he earned the 1990 George Foster Peabody Broadcasting Award, the 1991 Golden Award for Cable Excellence (ACE), the ACE award for best newscaster of the year and the 1991 Chairman's Award for Outstanding Journalistic Excellence from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In addition to Shaw's regularly scheduled newscasts, he anchors much of CNN's special-events coverage, including presidential primaries, political party conventions and national election-day coverage. He moderated one of the Democratic presidential candidates' debates in February and also was moderator during a presidential debate during the 1988 campaign.

Shaw has been a member of CNN since the network's inception in 1980. Before that, he worked for ABC News as its senior Capitol Hill correspondent, reporting extensively on the economy. Shaw also filed special reports during the 1979 American hostage crisis at the American Embassy in Tehran, Iran.

From 1971 to 1977, Shaw was a correspondent in the Washington bureau of CBS News. He began his career in 1964 as an anchor/reporter for WNUS-Chicago, one of the nation's first all-news radio stations.

A native of Chicago, Shaw studied history at the University of Illinois, Champaign, and in April 1991, the University of Illinois Foundation announced the establishment of the Bernard Shaw Endowment Fund, creating scholarships at the university's Chicago campus in his honor. Shaw donated $50,000 to help launch the project.

Findings exciting, not conclusive

By Glennelle Halpin
CHAIR, NCAA RESEARCH COMMITTEE

The members of the NCAA Research Committee are excited by the findings of NCAA Research Reports 92-01 and 92-02.

These are important reports because, while they are the seventh and eighth in the series of reports to come from the NCAA Study of Academic Performance of Student-Athletes, they represent the first attempt to use those data to assess the effects of Proposition 48 on the population of Division I student-athletes.

Halpin

The two reports that have been completed are only the first two in a series of reports on the effects of the initial-eligibility legislation that went into effect in the fall of 1986. These two reports describe the data we have collected for those student-athletes who entered a sample of Division I institutions in 1986 and compare those data with information collected from a sample that entered in either 1984 or 1985.

In the future, we will add data from the entering classes of 1987 and 1988 because we believe a study of multiple years after Proposition 48 went into effect will provide us with a truer database from which to make assessments about the effects of the legislation.

While the current data are preliminary, they provide some interesting findings. The overall increase in graduation rate, the significant increase in graduation rate for women and the decrease in graduation rates for full qualifiers in the revenue sports will be of particular interest to members of the Research Committee.

The findings related to the increase in graduation rates for partial qualifiers are particularly interesting because they could mean that the intervention that occurs in the freshman year has some effect on this group of student-athletes.

While we are very intrigued by the findings within these reports, they all should be treated as preliminary. These results will be used as a guide for further research and will provide the Research Committee with blueprints for designing the other analyses of these data.

Women's soccer goes for gold

By Dennis DeConcini

A decade ago, if you had bragged about your incredible slide tackle at the weekend game, you probably would have been met with confused, blank stares.

Today, many more would know that you were expressing your passion for soccer, the popular team sport that has swept the nation. Thousands of new teams, many of them geared toward youth and women, have sprouted up within the last decade.

Last year, the United States national women's soccer team competed with 44 teams from around the world and won the first women's World Cup. The victory indicates an explosion of interest in the sport, particularly among young women.

In 1990, high schools in the United States added soccer to their sports programs more than any other sport. Today, an estimated one-third of American children under the age of 18 play the sport, and 40 percent of these young soccer players are female.

Soccer teams across the United States are organizing large, regional leagues. This month, 360 U.S. women's teams met in Virginia to hold the world's largest annual women's tournament.

With national women's soccer teams now spanning six continents and 64 nations, the U.S. Congress has strongly supported U.S. Soccer President Alan Rothenburg in his efforts to secure women's soccer medal status in the 1996 Atlanta Olympic Games. Rep. James Moran (D-Virginia) and I sponsored a resolution that was unanimously passed by Congress in September to incorporate women's soccer into the roster of the Games.

Nevertheless, before the resolution sailed through Congress, the International Olympic Committee had decided that it could not fit women's soccer into the 1996 schedule of events. Moran and I countered by drafting letters to IOC President Juan Samaranch and Joao Havelange, president of the International Federation of Football Associations, urging that the sport be granted Olympic status.

Samaranch told the German soccer magazine Kicker in an October 2 interview that the committee may change its position. "Normally, it would be too late to accept women's soccer already for the 1996 Games," Samaranch said. "But we are working with FIFA on an entire soccer package for Atlanta that, if possible, will include women's soccer."

We are off to a great start, but we still need your support to ensure action. This month, the USA Soccer Association, the Georgia State Soccer Association, the Women's Soccer Foundation and Washington Area Girls Soccer are sponsoring a nationwide petition drive strongly backed by Moran and myself.

Petitions will be submitted to both Leroy Walker, the president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, and William Payne, the president of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games.

Soccer associations and enthusiasts hope to submit several hundred thousand signatures to these organizers to express the overwhelming support for women's soccer as a medal sport.

Please call or write my office (328 Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510; 202/224-4521) for a copy of the petition. Sign it and urge others to sign it as well. Send it to the attention of Leroy Walker and William Payne at the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, P.O. Box 1996, Atlanta, Georgia 30301-1996.

We need your support to prompt the organizers of the Atlanta Games to action. It would be shameful to see women's teams vie for the World Cup in 1995 but be denied competition for Olympic gold in 1996. Securing women's soccer the status of a medal sport is a necessary step in worldwide efforts to promote fairness in sports and to ensure opportunity for women athletes.

Your action can play the decisive role.

Dennis DeConcini is a United States senator from Arizona.

□ Opinions

Coaches need administrative support

Vic Feuerherd, columnist
Wisconsin State Journal

"If there is one faction a coach should always respect, it's his players. (How good) a coach is or thinks he might be is irrelevant because any coach is only as good as his players. So once that respect is no longer mutual, problems multiply. That's why the Memphis State and South Carolina (player revolt) situations are so disturbing.

"'Something like this is any coach's fear,' South Carolina coach Sparky Woods said after (the) session with the Gamecocks. 'I guess you always think it's a possibility when you're 0-5 and you've got disgruntled people who are criticizing you.'

"But it's too simple to believe that situations like these are merely the results of disgruntled players who are unhappy with playing time or losing and who release their frustrations on the coach.

"There is one solution to this sort of rebellion in situations where a coach has not crossed the border of ethical and acceptable behavior, and that's the unequivocal support of the administration."

Recruiting

John Feinstein, columnist
Basketball Times

"On a recent late-summer evening, I was talking to a friend of mine about a subject that was once close to my heart: college basketball recruiting. In recent years, I have made a point of trying not to know who the best high-school players in America are because I honestly believe the whole recruiting industry is a sick one."

Division I-A football playoff

Dan Devine, athletics director
University of Missouri, Columbia
The Arizona Republic

"I would favor them personally. I think you would find a full-blown playoff does not take the football player away from the classroom any more than athletes in other sports are away now."

Lou Holtz, football coach
University of Notre Dame
The Indianapolis Star

"I've always been a proponent to take two teams at the end of bowl games and have a one-game playoff. I think the two teams ought to be picked by computer, not by personal belief.

"I think that's one playoff system that would blend in with the current bowl system. I don't want to do anything to take away from the bowl games. There have been a lot of good memories of the bowl system where I took teams to bowl games without having a chance to win a national championship, yet we felt we finished the season on a successful note.

"But I do think annually there are two teams head and shoulders (above everybody else) that have an opportunity to be No. 1. Most teams aren't in school at that time or don't have final exams, and I think it would create tremendous interest.

"I think the championship should be decided on the field, and I do know this: I would pay to watch that game...

"I think (Division I-A football) is one of the few sports where you don't determine the championship on the field. You won't have changes until they're demanded. The first people you look at are the coaches. If you look over the last 12 years, 23 or 24 football teams would have been involved. Most coaches don't want a playoff system, and I'm one of them, if it would cost the current bowl system.

"I think they're opposed to a 16-game playoff because of the pressure and only one team ends up on a positive note. I think even if you get to a four-team playoff, you start stretching it."

Athletics funding

On funding cuts in Illinois:

"Our coaches are some of the best mentors we have on every college campus. So why can't they be supported in their work just as the professors are?

"When money is taken away from athletics, the message is loud and clear that coaches are not considered as important as the others, and I disagree strongly with that."

Changes help keep runners on their toes

By Steven R. Hagwell
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Every sport has its own built-in challenges. Whether it is an opponent or a tangible obstacle, each sport has its own way of testing competitors.

Cross country is no exception. But it is different.

"Cross country races are never the same. That's what makes the sport unique," said John Curtin, women's cross country coach at Emory University and a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee. "You'll never face the same challenges, the same terrain. Every race is different; every course provides different challenges."

They also provide different obstacles and potential pitfalls to which even the best runner can fall prey.

Consider the case of Christie Allen, a senior at Pittsburg State University who won the 1991 NCAA Division II Women's Cross Country Championships and was runner-up at the 1990 championships.

No stranger to a cross country course, Allen recently experienced a moment when she encountered a pitfall for which there is no preparation: nature.

Competing at a meet at the University of Missouri, Rolla, Allen was leading the race and appeared to be settling into a rhythm when, on approaching a sharp turn on the course, she suddenly paused.

"I lost sight of the course," recalled Allen. "It was kind of scary because I knew there was a line there, but I just couldn't see it. It took me a moment to locate it."

If nothing else, Allen's plight serves as an example of how, regardless of preparation, a cross country runner can be at the mercy of the many challenges that may develop over the course of a race covering 5,000 to 10,000 meters.

"There are so many variables that come into play," said Carol Stevenson, women's cross country coach at Purdue University and a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee. "Terrains are different, the weather can affect a race, the elements...there are so many things to account for."

Stevenson and Curtin both say that improved standards for course markings adopted by the NCAA have improved the sport greatly and also reduced the chances of runners getting off course.

Standards adopted in 1992 include the requirements that courses be marked by a single white or colored line for directional purposes only or two lines that mark the outside borders of the course (one on the measured course marking its shortest perimeter and the second so that runners cannot vary from the proper course).

The improved standards also require courses to be marked by flags, sign posts or stakes, which, among other things, must be at least seven feet above ground level.

"At the national level, courses are so impeccably marked that it's next to impossible for someone to make a mistake," Curtin said. "There are still some little glitches, but if the course is marked properly and if a runner is prepared, the chances of getting off course can be reduced."

Still, in a sport that covers such a distance, there always will be that chance.

Take a meet a few years ago at Purdue when a parking line caused several runners to veer off course.

According to Stevenson, a corner of the golf course on which the cross country race was being run was being used for parking cars from a Boilermaker home football game. The parking area contained white lines similar to the lines marking the course. The result was inevitable.

"When the kids came to the corner of the course, the lead runners started following the parking line and the other runners followed," recalled Stevenson. "They eventually got back on course."

Curtin says preparation is the key to preventing such mistakes. If runners take the time to review a course, go out before a race and run the course, they stand a better chance of avoiding such disaster.

"You have to take the time to prepare," Curtin said. "If you don't know the course, take the time to go over it. Preparation is the key.

"Of course, you'll never be able to account for everything. There are just too many variables to account for. But that's what makes cross country so exciting."

Research

Academic-performance reports are exciting, but not conclusive

It is important that these findings not be used as an argument for change or as a final assessment of Proposition 48. Our data show that the 1987 and 1988 entering classes will be somewhat different than those studied thus far, and judgment should be held until those data have been collected and analyzed.

In the meantime, the NCAA Research Committee will continue to release progress reports such as Reports 92-01 and 92-02. We are eager to receive suggestions about the type of analyses that should be run and the type of presentation that is most useful to groups within the membership. It is our intention that these data be presented in a manner that is useful to the membership of the Association and that stimulates discussion of the issues involved. We hope that Reports 92-01 and 92-02 meet those goals.

Glennelle Halpin is alumni professor at Auburn University.

Membership receives survey

A replication of the NCAA eating-disorders survey recently was distributed to senior women administrators of athletics programs at member institutions.

The information in this survey will assist the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports in the evaluation of its current work and in the establishment of future projects on this topic.

Administrators are asked to return the survey to Donna L Hockersmith at the NCAA national office by November 2.

■ Visitors Center update

The NCAA Visitors Center reaches its second anniversary in November with a month-long celebration that will be highlighted by the opening of two new attractions.

A new multimedia presentation entitled "More Than A Game" will premiere late in the month in the Center's theater. Earlier in November, the Gallery Room will feature a photographic exhibit on NCAA Olympians who participated in the '92 Games in Barcelona, Spain.

More than 75 NCAA committees, groups and special guests almost 3,500 college representatives—have toured the facility at the national office for meetings, receptions and gatherings since the Center officially opened two years ago.

Providing a photographic and video salute to college athletics, the Visitors Center drew nearly 65,000 visitors in its second year of operation.

More than 900 photographs featuring all 21 NCAA men's and women's sports currently are on display in the Center. All three divisions of competition are represented.

The new multi-image presentation for the Center's theater highlights NCAA championships and recognizes current and former student-athletes discussing the values of athletics and education. The show, produced by Bonneville Communications of Salt Lake City, will be premiere at a special reception November 19 and will be the main attraction among the theater presentations for the rest of the academic year.

New winter schedule announced

A winter schedule for the NCAA Visitors Center will begin November 1 and continue through February 28. The Center will be open to the general public Tuesday through Sunday and closed on Mondays.

The winter schedule:
- Tuesday through Saturday—10 a.m. to 5 p.m.
- Sundays and holidays—Noon to 5 p.m.
- Closed November 26, December 25 and January 1.

Admission: $2 adults; $1 children, students, senior citizens.
Group rates and tours are available by calling 913/339-0000.

Commemorative football on display

The football used to kick off the 100th anniversary celebration of black college football will be placed on display in the Visitors Center as a memento of the commemorative game played October 17 between Johnson C. Smith University and Livingstone College. When Johnson C. Smith was known as Biddle College, these same two teams played each other in December 1892, marking the historic moment in black college history.

The commemorative centennial game, won by Johnson C. Smith, used a special football at the opening kickoff. The ball was presented to the NCAA after the opening play and will reside in the Visitors Center to mark the commemoration of the game. The football will be placed in the football section display case, next to the Heisman Trophy won by Steve Owens of the University of Oklahoma during the centennial season of college football in 1969.

■ Championships previews

Division I Women's Soccer

Challengers set sights on dethroning Tar Heels

Portland's Tiffeny Milbrett is hoping to end the title streak of North Carolina.

Event: 1992 Division I Women's Soccer Championship.

Overview: North Carolina is favored to win its 10th championship in the 11-year history of the event. Connecticut, the only team besides the Tar Heels to have participated in the tournament all 10 years, is a top challenger. Other contenders include Stanford, Portland and Massachusetts.

Field: Twelve teams from four regions will be selected November 1. The top four teams will receive first-round byes.

Selection show: Monday, November 2, 11 a.m. EST, Galaxy 6, channel 24, transponder 24V.

Dates and sites: All games will be played on the campus of one of the competing institutions. First-round games will be completed by November 8 and second-round games by November 15. Semifinals are November 21, and the championship is November 22.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 23 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Colorado College has participated in the tournament in each of the last eight years, a streak bettered only by North Carolina and Connecticut.... North Carolina leads the pack in all-time tournament victories with 29, followed by Connecticut with 12, Massachusetts with 11 and Colorado College with 10.... As of mid-October, the Tar Heels had won an NCAA-record 50 consecutive games, including nine straight on the road. A 5-1 victory at Connecticut came just one day after returning from a four-game West Coast stretch that included victories over Portland and Stanford....Both Colorado College and Connecticut are two-time runners-up....Last year's Wisconsin team was only the second runner-up to avoid being shut out in the championship final.

What they are saying

Anson Dorrance
North Carolina coach
1991 champion

"We appreciate the intensity other teams come at us with, and we think that makes us a better team. Every team we play regards its game with us as a World Cup game, and it makes our intensity that much greater. There are a lot of excellent teams this year, including North Carolina State, Duke and Virginia from our own region."

Berhane Andeberhan
Stanford coach

"We are doing very well this year, led by a great player in Julie Foudy. We're a young team, but I think we're a legitimate top-10 team and maybe in the higher half, at that.

"Portland, Colorado College and Santa Clara are our main competition in the West right now. This year I feel there are seven or eight teams in our region battling for position. North Carolina is at a different level above everyone else, but I think we're in that second wave."

Carl Beal
Colorado College coach

"We still have a ways to go because we're pretty young, but if we keep grinding them out like we have been, we'll be OK. From our region, I would expect to see Stanford, Portland and Santa Clara make the tournament. In terms of teams around the country, it will still be everyone else against North Carolina."

Division II Women's Soccer

Toros looking for elusive title repeat

Event: 1992 Division II Women's Soccer Championship.

Overview: Last year's titlist, Cal State Dominguez Hills, continued the trend of a different team winning the championship in each of the tournament's four years. Barry and Keene State are the only schools to have made four tournament appearances. Others who figure to challenge are perennial powers Sonoma State, Mercyhurst and Adelphi.

Field: Six teams from four regions will be selected November 2. Two teams will receive first-round byes.

Selection show: Monday, November 2, 11 a.m. EST, Galaxy 6, channel 24, transponder 24V.

Dates and sites: All games will be played on the campus of one of the competing institutions. First-round games will be November 7 or 8. The semifinals will be November 14, and the championship will be November 15.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Barry's only two losses have come against Division I Duke and North Carolina State by 1-0 scores, the latter on a penalty kick in the 83rd minute of play.

What they are saying

Rich Illsley
Adelphi coach

"We're trying to put the pieces together. We go down to the last game of the regular season this year against Mercyhurst. The field just gets stronger every year. Franklin Pierce, Cal Davis, Mercyhurst and others have all made strong showings."

Mike Covone
Barry coach

"I'm excited about our team. We have a great blend of youth and experience with five seniors who have been to the final (round) three straight years."

Peter Reynaud
Sonoma State coach

"I'm very happy with my team because I have only two returning starters (Debra Martin and Renee DePiano) from last year. At times I've started six or seven freshmen, and they've been performing extremely well."

Division III Women's Soccer

Ithaca trying for three in a row

Event: 1992 Division III Women's Soccer Championship.

Overview: Ithaca became the tournament's second two-time champion last year. The Bombers successfully defended their 1990 crown with a victory over Rochester, the other double winner. Both teams figure to head the field again this year, along with Trenton State, UC San Diego and Plymouth State.

Field: Twenty teams from five regions will be selected November 1. Champions from the Empire Athletic Association and the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference will qualify automatically.

Selection show: Monday, November 2, 11 a.m. EST, Galaxy 6, channel 24, transponder 24V.

Dates and sites: All games will be played on the campus of one of the competing institutions. First-round games will be November 4. The semifinals will be November 7, and the championship will be November 8.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Cortland State, Plymouth State, Rochester, St. Mary's (Minnesota) and UC San Diego are the only teams to have participated in all six years of the tournament.... Last year was the first championship in which the runner-up from the previous year did not win the title.

What they are saying

Patrick Farmer
Ithaca coach
1991 champion

"Some of our players who gained experience as sophomores and juniors in the last two championship years have stepped up and risen to the challenge this year. Every year we say that there are eight to 10 teams that could win this thing, and this year is no different."

Terry Gurnett
Rochester coach

"We lost a lot of experienced players from last year, but I've been pleasantly surprised with how well we've done this season. There are so many teams now that are so good. No one team has dominated this year, which is great for soccer."

Brian McManus
UC San Diego coach

"We're a very young team with 11 first-year players and just two returning starters. I don't think we can get to the final (round) unless we step our game up a couple of notches. We've certainly got an uphill battle."

Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania photo

Senior Denise Miller's 14 goals have accounted for almost half of Bloomsburg's scoring this season.

Division II Field Hockey

After nine-year absence, II championship returns

Event: 1992 Division II Field Hockey Championship.

Overview: This is the first year there has been a Division II championship since 1983. Bloomsburg, Division III runner-up the past three years, won the 1983 championship. Other champions have been Pfeiffer and Lock Haven, another former Division III power.

Field: One team will be chosen from each of two regions.

Date and site: The championship game will be November 8 on the campus of one of the competing institutions.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 9 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Bloomsburg, which was Division III runner-up in three of the last four years and champion in 1987, won its first 11 games, but stumbled thereafter, falling to Franklin and Marshall, tying Millersville and losing to Johns Hopkins.... Keene State, which won six of its first nine games, ranks second in the North region behind Bloomsburg. In the South, Lock Haven, which met Bloomsburg October 21 in a possible championship preview, also is a former Division III power, having claimed that division's championship in 1989.... Lock Haven has fallen only to Division III Ithaca and Cortland State and Division II Millersville.... Shippensburg won eight of its first 11 but has found the going tough against the division's top competition, falling to both Bloomsburg (4-0) and Lock Haven (3-0).

What they are saying

Jan Hutchinson
Bloomsburg coach

"With the new legislation, I'm glad the NCAA created a place for us to go (with the Division II championships) because it would have been very difficult for us to move to Division I.

"I wish it could be at least a three- or four-team tournament. One game is a little anticlimatic after being in a 16-team tournament. I hope this tournament will grow."

Debbie Tweed
Shippensburg coach

"It's great to see Division II have its own championship. We were always in between Division I and III, and (playing in the Division III championship) Division III had dominated the championship as far as decision-making."

Sharon Taylor
Lock Haven coach

"I'm glad we're back in our own division, but I would like to have seen more of a championship tournament. When you have a committee in charge of picking the two best teams, there is a lot of room for dispute. I really think there are four or five quality teams that deserve to go."

Division III Field Hockey

Divisional moves shake up field

Event: 1992 Division III Field Hockey Championship.

Overview: Trenton State has won three of the last four years, including the last two. Two-time champion Bloomsburg, which has been runner-up in three of the last four years and was champion in 1987, has moved to Division II, as has Lock Haven, which won the 1989 title. The only other teams that have won the championship are Ithaca (1982) and Salisbury State (1986).

Field: The 16-team field will be announced November 2. At least two teams will be selected from each of five regions. The remaining six teams will be selected at large.

Dates and sites: Regionals will be held November 7 and 8 on the campus of one of the competing institutions. The semifinals and championship will be held November 13 and 14 on the campus of one of the competing institutions.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: William Smith, ranked first in the Mid-Atlantic Region, won 12 of its first 13 games. The loss came against Division II Bloomsburg, 1-0, in double overtime.... Two-time defending champion Trenton State is ranked second in the Mid-Atlantic. Since falling to Division II Millersville in the season-opener, the Lions have won 10 straight, eight by shutout.... The Mid-Atlantic's top two do not meet in the regular season.

Senior midfielder Cindy Oyler is just one player for William Smith who has postseason experience.

What they are saying

Maura Donahue
Worcester Polytechnic coach

"There are no superstars on this team, but they are all stars. If we work together, we can beat anybody, but if we don't, there goes a blemish on the unbeaten record. We haven't reached our peak yet, but with a lot of heart and hustle, we can be one of the best."

Sharon Goldbrenner
Trenton State coach

"There had been such a high level of competition in Division III and Bloomsburg, in particular, had been such an ongoing rivalry. Division III will miss that, but I don't think the level of competition will get any lower. It just creates an opportunity for more Division III institutions to be involved."

Methodist returns a young team, including sophomore Charlie Murias.

Division III Men's Soccer

Balance keeps title race wide open

Event: 1992 Division III Men's Soccer Championship.

Overview: Ohio Wesleyan and Elizabethtown are two of the favorites trying to unseat defending champion UC San Diego. Trenton State, last year's runner-up, also should contend.

Field: Thirty-two teams from eight regions will be selected November 1.

Dates and sites: All games will be played at on-campus sites. First- and second-round games will be played November 6 and 7 or November 7 and 8. Third-round games will be completed by November 15. The semifinals and final will be November 20 and 21 or November 21 and 22.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 23 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Ohio Wesleyan's top ranking may suffer after a 3-1 loss to unranked Otterbein in mid-October.... The Bishops are looking for a 15th straight tournament appearance, tops in NCAA Division III soccer history.... Elizabethtown has appeared in 12 consecutive championships.

What they are saying

Rick Dell
Trenton State coach

"We've got a nucleus of experience built around all-American forward Mike Edwards and senior goalkeeper Mike Rentner. Right now it looks like the four teams that made it from our region last year will repeat. It's a matter of who gets hot down the stretch. Our team, Montclair State, Rowan (formerly Glassboro State) and Kean are all teams that could easily be in the final (round)."

John Martin
Ohio Wesleyan coach

"We're a little bit faster and we've got a little more depth than last year. It's still a bit early to predict who will be there at the finish, but Muhlenberg and Elizabethtown are tough, and there are some new faces like Hobart in the New York area. Methodist is a very good team as well."

Alan Dawson
Methodist coach

"I'm extremely pleased with our team. We lost six senior starters from last year, but the chemistry has been very good this year."

Coaches certification exams to be more challenging

The degree of difficulty for the 1993 coaches certification examinations will be slightly higher than it was in the first year of the program.

The NCAA Council evaluated the program at its October 12-14 meeting and established the guidelines under which it will be conducted in 1993.

The Council determined that the 1993 version of the test will include questions on transfer regulations, in addition to the areas that were examined in the initial set of tests (recruiting, freshman academic requirements and the period of the institutional financial aid award).

The coaches certification program requires coaches to pass an open-book examination before they can recruit off-campus. The program applied only to Division I programs in 1992; Divisions I and II will be affected in 1993.

Coaches were required to answer at least 80 percent of the questions correctly before they would be certified. More than 98 percent of the basketball coaches, more than 97 percent of the football coaches and more than 95 percent of all other sports coaches passed the exam.

In reviewing the program, the Council decided to continue with 80 as the passing grade but agreed to toughen the exam by broadening the subject matter and by eliminating the least challenging questions. In addition to transfer regulations, the Council considered adding questions about remaining seasons of competition but chose not to do so.

Kevin C. Lennon, NCAA director of compliance services, said many coaches indicated a belief that the test was too easy and that they had overprepared for it.

However, Lennon said those writing the questions were sensitive to coaches' concerns that the test would be excessively difficult, perhaps "trapping" them with questions involving subtle legalistic matters. To allay that concern, Lennon said a decision was made to make the questions and answers as straightforward as possible.

The Division II test is being developed and will be reviewed by the Council at its January meeting. Divisions I and II examinations for 1993 are scheduled to begin March 1.

■ Administrative Committee minutes

Conference No. 18 October 11, 1992

1. Acting for the NCAA Council, the Administrative Committee:

a. Reviewed earlier Council legislative positions, specifically including any affected by subsequent amendments or by actions of the Presidents Commission.

b. Reviewed waiver-authority issues, specifically continuing requests for Council waivers where no authority exists to grant such waivers; agreed to present the issue to the Council with the recommendation that no request for a waiver be presented to the Council unless there is specific authority in NCAA legislation to grant a waiver of the involved rule.

c. Appointed Kathy Krannebitter, West Chester University of Pennsylvania, to the Field Hockey Committee, replacing Vonnie Gros, Ursinus College, resigned.

d. Approved a request by the Division II Men's Basketball Committee for a waiver per Bylaw 21.1.1.1.3 to allow Elwood N. Shields, chair of the committee, to continue as a member and as chair through the committee's June 1993 meeting despite his official retirement from Bentley College January 1, 1993.

e. Reviewed a sample newsletter per an earlier Administrative Committee decision (Conference No. 16, Minute No. 1-j); concluded that such a newsletter should be sent to the membership on a monthly basis, beginning later in October, in an effort to provide key information in a brief, timely manner.

f. Reviewed Council meeting procedures and agreed to continue with the current format and procedures.

Special alumnus message

Richard "Digger" Phelps, who compiled a 393-197 record in 20 seasons as head coach at the University of Notre Dame, returned to his alma mater, Rider College, October 6 to address student-athletes on the "Weed and Seed" antidrug initiative, which has a pilot program in nearby Trenton, New Jersey. Phelps now serves as special assistant to the director for the office of national drug-control policy in Washington, D.C.

Scholar games rely on ex-athletes

Several former student-athletes at NCAA member institutions are serving as directors for the 1993 World Scholar-Athlete Games, which are scheduled for June 20 through July 1, 1993, in Newport and Kingston, Rhode Island.

The directors were selected by the Institute for International Sport, which is organizing the athletics, academic and cultural event.

They are:

■ Mike Palladino, a former all-Ivy Group cross country and track athlete at Yale University, who is recruiting and organizing the games as director of volunteers.

■ Chrtistine Franek, a former Brown University tennis captain, who is organizing five "theme days" during the games on the topics of the environment, drug abuse, international commerce, world peace and sportsmanship/ethics.

■ Eligibility appeals

In cases that involve recruiting violations, the NCAA Council adopted at its August 1992 meeting a policy that authorizes the NCAA Eligibility Committee to treat cases involving recruiting violations with the same degree of flexibility afforded in all other eligibility cases.

The previous policy, which was adopted in 1974, required that when a prospective student-athlete was involved in a violation of recruiting legislation and a "recruiting advantage" was found (regardless of its significance), the Eligibility Committee was required either to restore eligibility completely or to decline to restore eligibility, leaving the prospect permanently ineligible at the involved institution.

Often, an innocent prospective student-athlete was penalized severely for a violation for which the institution was primarily responsible.

Accordingly, those cases involving prospects will be treated in a manner similar to other cases in that the imposition of a condition for restoration will be based upon the nature of the violation committed, the extent of the involvement of the prospective student-athlete and an assessment of the institution's responsibility for the occurrence of the violation.

However, the committee's treatment of such cases will continue to reflect a high level of sensitivity to the advantage gained through recruiting violations. Because the eligibility ramifications of violations that involve prospects and enrolled student-athletes continue to involve different issues, those cases that involve prospects will continue to be published separately from other matters.

Also, note that any actions taken by the institution, conference or NCAA Committee on Infractions regarding the institution's responsibility for the occurrence of the violation that caused the ineligibility of the student-athlete are reported along with the publication of the particular eligibility case.

Eligibility Appeals
Drug Testing

(Note: Eligibility appeals regarding those student-athletes who have tested positive for drug use under Bylaw 18.4.1.5.1 are reported in a separate category on a periodic basis. Pursuant to Bylaw 18.4.1.5.1, any student-athlete who has a positive NCAA test result must remain ineligible for competition for the mandated period of one year, must have a negative retest by the NCAA and must make a request for restoration of his or her eligibility to the Eligibility Committee before he or she can be eligible for competition.

In addition, note that the application of Bylaw 18.4.1.5.1 necessarily caused the involved student-athlete who participates in the season in which he or she tests positive to lose at least the equivalent of one season of competition. Therefore, the Eligibility Committee will require, absent significant mitigating factors, those student-athletes who test positive and who do not use a season of competition per Bylaw 14.2.4.1, to lose at least one season of competition. This policy is intended to ensure that all those who test positive will receive equitable treatment.)

In this time period, there have been nine cases with the following action:

significant policy implication for the Association.

In addition to the Commission's own proposals—including the athletics certification requirement for Division I and other proposals relating to that issue—the Presidential Agenda Day will include 18 attempts to change the playing-season limitations, six amendments dealing with financial aid limitations, five on coaching limits, five dealing with academic requirements or related matters, two on the enforcement and infractions process, and a governance issue.

The 45 proposals set aside for Presidential Agenda Day will be reviewed in detail in a November issue of The NCAA News.

Because of multiple-section amendments and varying voting requirements, the actual number of votes cast by roll call will exceed the base number of 45. Motions to dispose of a roll-call voting issue—such as attempts to table or postpone—also must be taken by roll call.

The Commission officers cited the greater efficiency in the Association's electronic voting procedures in announcing their decision to have all Presidential Agenda Day votes conducted in that manner.

Unless the NCAA Council decides to sponsor additional amendments-to-amendments or resolutions during its pre-Convention meeting January 11-12, there will be no other proposals up for vote at the Convention January 13-16 in Dallas.

All 176 proposals will be printed in the Official Notice of the Convention, which will be mailed from the national office November 13. They will appear in a grouping for Presidential Agenda Day and then in topical groupings for the remainder of the proposals. All also will be reviewed in a series of articles in the News beginning in the November 9 issue.

have them.

"We learned a great deal from this meeting with the sports-committee chairs," said Eugene F. Corrigan, Atlantic Coast Conference commissioner and chair of the Division I Championships Committee. "It was an excellent opportunity to hear about the state of the various sports from those who know the most about them."

The Executive Committee will consider information presented at the sports-committee hearings during its December meeting. Between January and May, more comment will be solicited from the membership. The Executive Committee hopes to consider a final plan for review and action at its May 1993 meeting.

Besides Corrigan, other members of the Division I championships subcommittee were Phyllis L. Howlett, Big Ten Conference; Cedric W. Dempsey, University of Arizona, and R. Elaine Dreidame, University of Dayton.

the benefits of retirement is that you can pontificate without any accountability," he said, "but, of course, the tradeoff is that there are fewer people willing to listen to me."

He is continuing to receive, and starting to take time to appreciate, the accolades for which he is so deserving.

"Of the things of which I am most proud, there are two," he said. "The first is the distinguished alumni award at Iowa and the second is the high-school baseball field (the Wayne Duke Field) in my hometown (Burlington, Iowa). I have been privileged to be involved in such athletics spectacles as the Rose Bowl and the Final Four, yet the honor of having a field named after me represents the biggest thrill, because I cherish my personal athletics experience. Those are things that are lasting."

The Council determined that an institution that is providing a financial aid award to a student-athlete to attend the institution's summer session is not required to give the recipient a written statement of the amount, duration, conditions and terms of the award. [Note: This interpretation revises a previous Interpretations Committee minute (reference: Item No. 3 of the minutes of the committee's August 27, 1992, conference).]

4. The Council determined that it is not permissible for a Division I-A institution to replace one of the seven designated football coaching staff members during a given week (i.e., Sunday through Saturday) if the staff member is unable to continue performing off-campus recruiting activities during the week due to circumstances beyond the coach's control. Bylaw 13.3.1
Distribution of admissions and graduation-rate data

Division I institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.3.1.2, an institution must provide to a prospect and the prospect's parents, guidance office, and high-school and two-year coaches all information contained within the admission and graduation-rate report (see Bylaw 30.1). The information must be provided at the earliest opportunity during the recruiting process or upon request; however, it is not permissible for an institution to provide the information later than the day before the prospect's signed acceptance of the National Letter of Intent or signed acceptance of the institution's written offer of admission and/or financial aid.

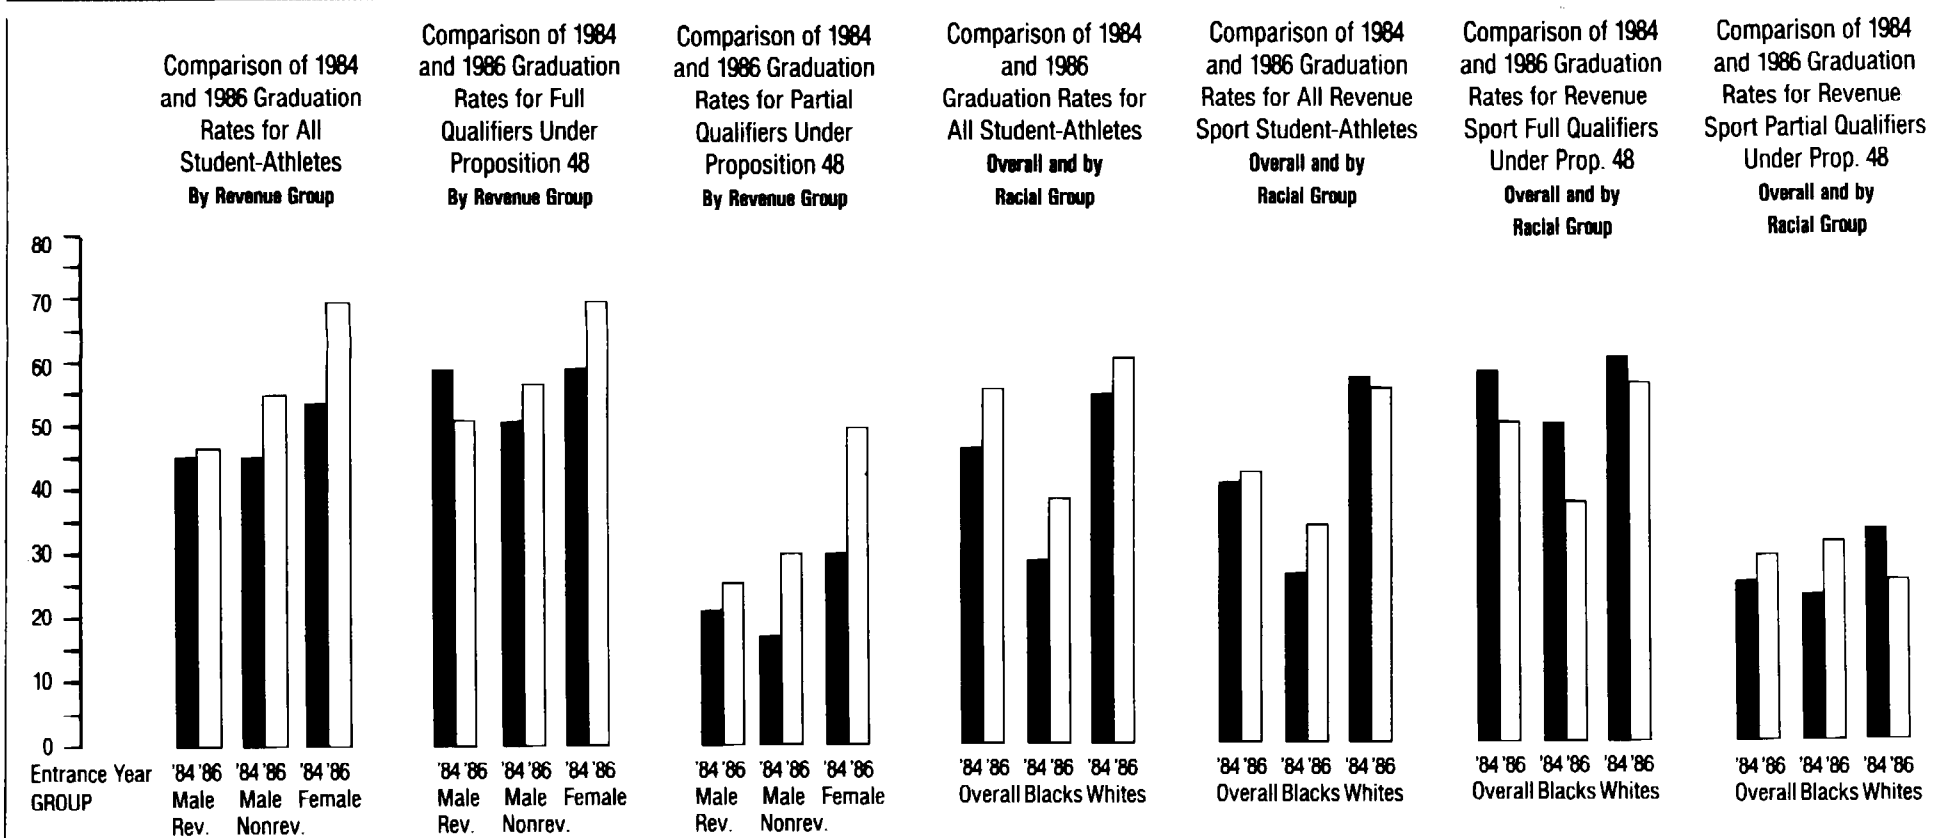

During its September 24, 1992, conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that an institution must provide the graduation-rate data specified in 30.1.2 to a prospect, as well as the prospect's parents, guidance office and coach, at the earliest opportunity subsequent to an institution's first arranged in-person encounter with the prospect (or the prospect's parents) or the day before the prospect's signed acceptance of the National Letter of Intent or signed acceptance of the institution's written offer of admission and/or financial aid, whichever is earlier.

The committee also determined that it is permissible for an institution to use one envelope to provide the graduation-rate report to the prospect and his or her parents and one envelope to provide the report to the prospect's guidance office and coach. Finally, if an institution is recruiting more than one prospect in the same sport at a particular high school or two-year college in a given year, it is not necessary to provide the high-school or two-year college coach and the guidance office more than one graduation-rate report.

significantly in the 1986 cohort.

■The overall graduation rate for black male student-athletes increased in the 1986 cohort, as did the rate for black male partial qualifiers. The rate also increased for black male partial qualifiers in the revenue-producing sports; however, the rate declined for black male qualifiers in revenue-producing sports.

A second report, NCAA Report 92-02, will be released soon. It is a study of the variables predicting graduation of freshman student-athletes who entered college in 1986.

The report is designed to assess the prediction of college graduation from precollege variables such as test score and core grade-point average. The report found that test scores and core GPA serve as moderately good predictors of graduation rate for the student-athletes who entered Division I institutions in the fall 1986. An earlier report had shown similar results for the entering student-athletes of 1984 and 1985.

Other findings from Report 92-02 are:

■An equally weighted average of core GPA and test scores predicts as well as any other single or multiple variable examined.

■Cohort increases in graduation rates appear to be a direct result of cohort increases in initial test scores and core GPAs. The initial-eligibility regulations are correlated with these scores; the regulations, therefore, have an indirect effect on graduation rate.

■There is little or no evidence that graduation prediction varies between racial groups and sexes, or across cohorts.

■Some evidence shows that school selectivity might be a potentially useful predictor of graduation rate (that is, a student with marginal qualifications is more likely to earn a degree from some institutions than others).

■The males who are in revenue sports graduate at a higher rate than the males in nonrevenue sports, given the same level of achievement on high-school grades and test scores.

"These results are not unexpected," said Glenelle Halpin, chair of the NCAA Research Committee. "Previous data had shown us that student-athletes with higher test scores and core GPAs graduate at higher rates. Since the group of student-athletes who make up the 1986 cohort entered with significantly higher test scores and core GPAs, on average, we expected that the graduation rates would reflect that change."

Halpin said the purpose of these studies is to describe differences between the two samples. She said that the report will "simply identify significant areas in which we have seen changes occur in the group that entered after Proposition 48 went into effect."

Halpin noted that the male revenue-sports group is the only group that graduates at a higher rate than expected based on incoming test scores and GPAs. "That is, there seems to be some value added by virtue of being a revenue sport athlete in terms of your chances of graduating," she said. "This is something that we will study more in the future."

Halpin also noted that the results are preliminary.

"This is the first set of post-Proposition 48 data," she said.

When the data from the entering class of 1987 and 1988 are analyzed, a much clearer picture of the effects of that legislation should be available. The current data will serve as a "progress report" and will help to identify areas for further study.

"For example," Halpin said, "we will pay particular attention to future graduation rates of full qualifiers in the revenue sports to see if the decrease observed this year becomes a trend. As this study continues, we will gain more insight into the true effects of Proposition 48. These reports represent only the first attempt at identifying the effects."
